MIT's Number One computer guru , according to Time Magazine, the author of this wry and witty book disparages the high-tech devices . computers, laptops, Web cell phones, digital organizers . that people have become so dependent upon . Far-seeing , he predicted that " In a few years, he warns, there will be 10 times as many of these "creatures biting at" us . He gives his vision of a time when " we alternate ample leisure with intellectually stimulating work, seamlessly integrated by technology that spares us the inconveniences of modern life. " . " The key, says Dertouzos, is "human-centric computing," technological devices that "talk with us, do things for us, get the information we want, help us work with other people, and adapt to our individual needs. " . He talks about devices that " truly serve us, instead of the other way around." . Michael L. Dertouzos has headed up the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Laboratory for Computer Science for more than 25 years. In this book he unmasks the deficiencies of our present systems & makes a compelling case for "human-centric computing," which has the potential to dramatically reduce r techno-aggravation, while improving productivity & effectiveness . Written for people who use computers & for the technologists who design & build them, this fascinating book clearly lays out a vision of human-centric computing, and connects his...
