The plant house is 88 by 124 feet, partly covered with glass and partly with wire netting. An additional weighing room, 30 by 15 feet, made of cement and covered by tile, was constructed. This house is equipped with cars and tracks, on which pots are mounted for soil and plant studies. (See Pl. I, figs. 1 and 2. ) The old sugar-mill building, 29 by 196 feet, had the south wall torn out and rebuilt and was covered with a tile roof. It is used for the storage of heavy chemicals, apparatus, and hand machinery. The improvement of the station grounds was continued, wooden culverts, fence posts, etc. , being replaced with cement structures. The distribution of seeds, plants, and cuttings has been larger than in any previous year. This includes valuable importations which have been tested at the station and others of local origin and improvement. The correspondence and field work of the station staff continues to expand. This work is of such amount as to hamper the research work of the station, yet its importance calls for more effort along these lines. Provision for extension work in Porto Rico would, it is believed, be of material assistance to the planters and serve the important purpose of bringing the results of research directly to their attention--a matter very much to be desired. By P. L. Gile and J. O. Cabbeko. INTRODUCTION. The work the past year was continued along the lines noted...
